Subject: some criminals

Dear Sir/Madam,

I have been a computer user for close to 20 years and my general impression of Microsoft over that time is that they have done more to retard progress in the industry than advance it. However, I'm disgusted by that fact that having broken the law, as verified unanimously by the Court of Appeals, they are not being punished or restricted in how they go about obtaining dominance of the internet.

The government should have levied a serious fine on the company (at least $10 billion) and required them to sell a basic, functioning (as determined by an independent panel) operating system for 1/2 the cost of Windows with competition stifling add-ons.

Thanks,
